Andrew Tolan, a young professional in New York City, originally hails from Scranton, Pennsylvania. Since the time he could write sentences on loose paper and staple them together, Andrew has always found himself immersed in the concept of stories and fiction — finding passion in creating characters and the unique worlds they live in. After years of cultivating ideas, notes, and creative musings, Andrew decided to compile his writings and set forth on shaping them into full-length works. His debut novel, Hollow Planet, is the first book in the series. Later installments are currently in development. Read More

After the death of his beloved father, Daniel's life has never exactly become that of a typical teenager. He essentially home schooled himself and maintains a full time job at the local store. Additionally, he is forced to raise his younger sister since his mother made her social life a crutch to dealing with the loss of her husband. Daniel would love nothing more than to have a normal teen-age life — and to have his dad back. However, Daniel's despondent life would now become quite peculiar the day he meets a link to his father: a man by the name of Sef. Read More
